Hello,

As a lifelong resident of the South Seattle area, I have felt the rising tension and fear regarding the sanctity of our home's natural ecosystems.

Our humble small businesses and the livelihood of our communities of color have diminished due to gentrification, and now so do our trees?

Can we manage to maintain this great State of Evergreen in the coming years, or will we fall to become the lowly Townhouse State? Once stately and proud, our flora stood, now shall stand mediocre architectural eyesores?

Absolutely not!

The development of the Mapes Creek area is not only a downright disservice to our neighborhood, but ILLEGAL-- as I'm sure you'd find, if your eyes are not too deeply wound in your pockets, and hard pressed on the land measurements and regulations.

Sincerely,
Leila E.
